TRIBUTE TO WASHINGTON

Scores of great men have contributed to the greatness of America, but among all these there is not one to dispute the place of George Washington as the father of his country.

Perhaps he never dreamed that a nation second to none in the history of the world would grow from the tiny seed he planted, and would pause on a day 204 years after his birth, to honor him as we are doing now.

But it was Washington, with his steadfast vision of a people free and united, who brought our country through that perilous period of infancy when it was fragile and might easily have broken to bits.

His courage in the face of physical danger first, it was, which saw us through the Revolutionary War. Had he once quavered, America would have been doomed to become another Ireland, with a long, bloody struggle for independence lasting perhaps into the twentieth century.

His mental courage later held the states together in the confused days following the war. Had he given an inch then, there would be no great nation here today, but a conglomeration of petty principalities, some if not all merely colonies of European powers.

From before the signing of the Declaration of Independence in 1789, Washington was the leader, the one staunch pillar supporting the genesis of America.

The Nation pays tribute to him now, by observing the day of his birth, and by thinking of him as he truly was—the father of his country.

BLOOD SPOT IS CLUE IN 2 SLAYINGS

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 21.—UP—Traced by tiny spots of blood, John Stettler, 25 year old chauffeur, admitted tonight according to police he had planned and executed the weird "clock murder" of Carl S. Barbour, elderly and wealthy apartment house owner, and his wife.

Stettler was arrested after blood-spots on his clothing reportedly were analyzed by a chemist to determine whether it was human blood.

STRANGE DEVICE

Captain Bert Wallis of the homicide squad said Stettler first confessed making a strange device with an electric heater and a dollar watch, which set fire to the apartment in which the bodies of the slain couple had been left.

After several hours' questioning, Stettler admitted he had murdered the couple, Wallis said.

CONFESSES CRIME

Stettler told police that he had not intended to harm the aged couple, but only to rob them of sufficient cash to total $600 he needed to prevent foreclosure of his home.

He said he went to the apartment 8:30 P. M. Wednesday and talked for awhile with Mrs. Barbour. Later he went into the bedroom to the

LINDY CASE CONNECTION IS DENIED

SANTA ANA, Feb. 21.—UP—A slender, mild mannered German carpenter, who "looks very much like Bruno Hauptmann," convicted slayer of the Lindbergh baby, was questioned tonight by police and Federal authorities on reports he had some information about Hauptmann and the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

The man gave his name as Alexander Christian Witten, 35 years old. He admitted, according to Sheriff Logan Jackson who questioned him in county jail here, that he entered the United States illegally from Germany, but denied he had ever been in New Jersey.

ARRESTED AT HOME

He was booked by Inspector Franklin Davis of the United States immigration inspection service, for investigation on suspicion of violating the immigration act.

Witten was arrested at his home at Balboa, by deputy sheriffs acting on information from an unnamed person that Witten "looked very much like Bruno Richard Hauptmann."

According to the informant, a picture of a man resembling Witten appeared in a recent issue of "True Detective" magazine, in connection with an article by a "Rev. Mr. Burns" who said Witten told him

Sacramento River On Rampage; Floods Will Strike Valley Today

COLUSA, Feb. 21.—UP—A flood of major proportions was forecast for large areas of the fertile Sacramento valley within the next 24 hours by Meteorologist Edgar Fletcher tonight.

The wide, winding Sacramento river, fed by torrents of run off rain waters, was rapidly reaching the danger stage here and at Red Bluff.

NEAR FLOOD LEVEL

Fletcher said that at the present rate of increase—one foot an hour—the river will be approximately three feet above the flood level at 10 A. M. tomorrow. At Red Bluff, the river had risen to 22 feet at 7 P. M. Danger stage is 23 feet.

A hastily summoned crew of workmen were employed to stand guard at long intervals along 15 miles of "weak" levee near Colusa, where numerous breaks were expected hourly.

At Colusa, the river had risen above the 26-foot mark, nearing an all-time record, and exceeding by nearly a foot the high level of last month when the rampaging stream broke through the Moulton weir and poured large volumes of water onto grazing lands.

RESIDENTS WARNED

Supervisor J. B. Ohrt, of Colusa county, took personal charge of emergency work in preparation for the expected inundation, and warned residents to be prepared for the overflow.

Fletcher indicated that he anticipated an extensive innundation in the vicinity of Red Bluff, situated in the extreme northern end of the valley in the heart of a rich grain and orchard district.

He expressed no fear for stability of the levees near Red Bluff but said he believed nothing short of an unexplainable stoppage of run-off waters in the numerous mountain streams could prevent the excess rain waters rising over the sides of the banks of the river.

RAIN STILL FALLING

Heavy rains were reported falling steadily throughout the northern end of the valley and in the foothill region, continuing a two-week downpour which earlier caused floods in other sections of the state, took several lives and accounted for an undetermined amount of damage to property.

SAN QUENTIN HEAD QUITS DURING QUIZ

SAN RAFAEL, Feb. 21—UP—Warden James B. Holohan of San Quentin prison will resign April 1 as an outgrowth of the discovery of counterfeiting behind the walls of his prison, Judge T. H. Harvey, chairman of the California Board of Prison Directors announced today.

Holohan's resignation has been rumored for weeks. San Quentin is the largest state penal institution in the United States.

CONFIRM RESIGNATION

Warden Holohan himself confirmed the resignation in an interview with newspaper men.

"I am not leaving immediately," he said. "I will remain long enough to see that everything under investigation is cleared up. I am going to take a good long rest and have no plans further than that. But I am not going out with any shadow behind me. I want everything cleared up. Whoever my successor, I shall remain to show him the ropes, and then—the big rest."

WILL GO TO RANCH

The warden said he might go to his ranch at Watsonville or to Tassajara Springs, he indicated.

Meanwhile, with the selection of a new warden yet to be accomplish-

Men Involved In Brutal Assault To Be Charged

MARTINEZ, Feb. 21—Deputy District Attorney Rex L. Boyer announced today he will submit to Chief of Police Al Leroy of Antioch for signing complaints charging attempted murder, burglary and attempted robbery against three men who saw or participated in the beating of Adaline S. Knight, 86, at his ark on the Antioch waterfront last Friday night.

The three men, held here, are Fallis Sutton, Lewis Sly and Leroy Bussey.

Authorities had intended withholding filing of complaints against the men pending the outcome of fist and hatchet wounds inflicted upon the aged man but it was determined today complaints will be filed immediately.

Knight in the county hospital here, continued in critical condition today. His strength has proved amazing to hospital attaches.

He suffered a skull fracture and was brutally beaten about the face.

Sutton told officers the door to the old man's ark was battered down so they could secure a pistol they knew he possessed to sell it and get liquor for a drinking bout.

Picket Line Must Permit Fuel Passage

AKRON, O., Feb. 21.—UP—A six judge court tonight ordered pickets at the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. to break their lines to allow coal trains to pass into the three blockaded plants.

The court order was issued as another effort was made to induce the company to enter negotiations with strikers, who are protesting dismissal of 70 veteran tire builders.

The company, which also sought to open the picket lines to food, argued that coal was necessary to prevent heavy damage to both machinery and supplies.

The court refused the Goodyear request to open the lines to food. There are nearly 500 employes, mostly office workers, in the plants, but the company reportedly has large stocks of goods on hand.

John House, Union leader, said that "if anybody in the plant wants to get food, he can come out and get it."

The court postponed until tomorrow morning final arguments on the company's request for an injunction restraining mass picketing.

Bum Blockade Reception Is Given Masons

SALINAS, Feb. 21.—UP—A "border patrol" reception, planned along the same lines as the reception given incoming transients by Los Angeles police in their recent "bum blockade" of California borders, awaited a Los Angeles Masonic degree team when it arrived here today.

The contingent, en route to San Francisco, was met by Chief of Police George Griffin on the outskirts of the city, where a sign reading "Los Angeles City Limits" had been posted. (Salinas is approximately 320 miles north of Los Angeles.)

The Masons then were escorted by motorcycle police to the Salinas railroad yards where refreshments were served in a freight box car.

Salinas police, acting as hosts, were attired as hoboes. During the box-car tete-a-tete, conspirators closed the doors of the car, manned the locomotive, and hauled the group a short distance in the direction of Los Angeles.

Will Release Half Million Under Arms

ROME, Saturday, Feb. 22—UP—A half million men will be released from the Italian army soon and sent to their homes as a result of a general improvement in the international situation, the United Press was informed by highly reliable sources early today.

Men belonging to the classes of 1911, 1912 and 1913 will receive an indefinite furlough, it was said. However, soldiers now engaged in Italy's campaign against Ethiopia will not be included in the discharge.

The men will be discharged gradually and, may be recalled within 24 hours in event of an unforeseen situation.

It is understood that Premier Mussolini decided to release 50,000 soldiers from the above classes on grounds that the present calmness of the international situation does not warrant keeping such a large force on a war footing within the Italian area.

An additional factor influencing his decision, it was said, is the remoteness of the possibility of the League of Nations adopting additional sanctions against Italy to halt the war in Ethiopia.

These papers were discovered by relatives and friends who were going through Inman's papers. It is not known how the discharge papers got there.

McCormac pointed out that these discharge papers would aid Swedberg to get his pension, if he is still alive. Anyone having information as to the whereabouts of the man have been asked to contact McCormac.

CORNELL SETS $16,000 AS TOP COACH SALARY

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—UP—Cornell football, which plunged to its lowest depths in gridiron history, will be accorded every opportunity to stage a comeback under the new athletic regime at the Ithaca institution.

One of the first jobs facing the new athletic director, James Lynah, is the selection of a football coach to succeed "Gloomy Gil" Dobie.

Applicants for the job are divided into three classifications:

Those who are seeking the post.

Those Cornell is seeking.

Those being pushed by the alumni.

The qualifications of every man in each group will be studied carefully before the final choice is made March 1. The head coach may not be selected until after spring football, if it is necessary to wait that long to get the right man. There is a strong possibility that Eddie Pierce, successful Ithaca high school coach, will assume charge until fall, and then become head freshman coach.

SALARY MAY BE $16,000

Another possibility is that a Cornell graduate coach may take charge of spring practice until the coach Cornell selects is available.

Athletic Director Lynah is personally inclined toward the selection of a young coach rather than an old established one. Cornell is sincere in its desire to turn out a winning team again, and will go as high as $16,000 for the man picked. In addition the school will furnish a home for him at Ithaca.

Among those who have been mentioned as Dobie's successor are Slip Madigan, St. Mary's coach; Harold "Red" Grange, assistant coach of the Chicago Bears professional team; Lynn Waldor, Northwestern coach; Don Peden, Ohio University coach; Charles Caldwell, former Princeton star coaching at Williams; Dick Hanley, former Northwestern coach; Clark Shaughnessy, U. of Chicago coach, and Johnny Gorman, Princeton freshman coach.

The powerful alumni of Chicago and the Middle West have been boosting Shaughnessy, who has made a fine record with poor material at Chicago. He formerly was successful at Tulane and Loyola (New Orleans). Gorman, who has made an enviable record with the Princeton freshmen, is the leading choice of eastern alumni.

GRANGE HAS SUPPORTERS

For those who want to see a young coach, with new ideas, tackle the Cornell job, Red Grange who many believe knows as much football as any coach in the country because of his long experience in the professional league, is the leading choice.

Instead of one coach having supreme command as did Dobie, there will be a great many more assistant coaches under the new regime. The present plan is to have four assistant coaches for the freshman team and six for the varsity.

Although Cornell did not win a game last fall, losing six and tying Columbia, 7-7, prospects are not so dismal for 1936. Last year's freshman team was the finest in Cornell's history.

For resigning while his contract still had two years to run, Dobie is understood to have received a $25,000 settlement. He immediately signed at Boston College for a sum said to be $10,000. Thus in 1936 he will be the highest paid coach in the country, getting about $22,500 from his old job and new one combined.

SANTA ANITA HANDICAP TO BE RUN TODAY

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 21 — Fifteen horses were named today to start in tomorrow's $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap.

Norman Church's Riskulus was listed as a doubtful starter, depending upon the condition of the track. If the track isn't to the favor of the big chestnut, he won't go postward.

A pale sun was slowly bleaching out the track today but more rain was forecast by tomorrow, promising heavy going for the field.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt's great Discovery remains a distinct favorite, but there will be several other shorter-priced contenders getting plenty of play at the mutuel windows. A. A. Baroni's little Top Row, twice conqueror (and twice loser) to Discovery last year, and Time Supply, Mrs. F. A. Carreaud's horse, are primed for the race. Fred M. Alger Jr., unless a torrent of rain descends before post time, is determined to send Azucar back with a hope of repeating his "sugar" win in the Santa Anita inaugural last year.

Whopper, which fell before Top Row but finished ahead of Discovery at Suffolk last October, doesn't mind the mud, if mud it is to be, and Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Singing Wood is crying for off-going. Ariel Cross and Tick On, the latter with two victories in the mud to his credit, and Thursday, Pompey's Pillar, Howard and He Did, the latter winner of the $25,000 derby last Saturday, loom as threats at better prices than the rest.

Figuring 15 starters tomorrow, the winner of the great classic will receive $105,700. Twenty horses went to the post in last year's inaugural and Azucar collected $108,400.

The field, with post position, follows:

1—Azucar; 2—Howard; 3—Thursday; 4—Riskulus; 5—Preeminent; 6—Singing Wood; 7—Pompey's Pillar; 8—He Did; 9—Whopper; 10—Top Row; 11—Tick On; 12—Discovery; 13—Time Supply; 14—Ariel Cross; 15—Rosemont.

Finals are set for tomorrow. Favorite to capture the "indoor" tournament is Scotty Campbell, Seattle, Northwest and Canadian champion. The tournament is supposed to exploit Vancouver Island's spring-like winter weather.

Close Scores Feature Basketball Contest

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 21.—UP—University of Southern California, hitting on all cylinders, forged into the lead in the southern section of the Pacific Coast conference tonight with a surprising victory over the Stanford Indians, 45 to 36.

The Trojans forged to the front for the first time just before the half, taking a 22 to 20 lead. Stanford was never able to head them after that.

Perfect floor work and uncanny shooting by Captain Jack Hupp, lanky Trojan center, accounted for the southerners' victory. Hupp rolled up 23 points, scoring 10 field goals and three free throws.

BEARS BEAT BRUINS

BERKELEY, Feb. 21.—UP—University of California's Bears stayed in the Southern Division running for basketball honors tonight by taking a hotly fought overtime game from U. C. L. A. 34 to 32.

Behind, 14 to 17, at the half, the Bears put on steam in the second half while bottling up Ball, lanky UCLA center and ace basket shooter and built up a thin lead.

With three minutes to go in the game, Alex Widliska, substitute forward, dropped in a looping shot to tie the score at 29 all. He tried another shot a moment later, but only rimmed the hoop. Then Carlisle, Jensen and Balsley all tried to drop winning baskets in the remaining minutes of regular play but failed.

In the overtime period, big Bob Herwig, guard and football player dropped in a field goal that made it 37 to 29. Balsley shot another with less than two minutes to go. Then Ball made good a free throw for the Bruins and Bill Robinson sank a field goal to make the score 32 to 33. Don Jensen then shot a free throw to make the final score 34 to 32.

GAELS ARE VICTORS

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 21.—UP—Dead-eye shooting from the foul line and a refusal to give up the ship in the closing seconds of play in tonight's game gave St. Mary's hoopsters a 42 to 38 win over the U. S. F. Dons.

With three minutes to go in the last period the score stood at 38-37 in favor of the Dons. Then Walter McCarthy fouled Bill Rockwell, St. Mary's scoring ace, as he was about to take a shot at the basket, giving Rockwell a pair of tries from the foul line. After missing the first, Rockwell made the second one good to tie the score. In rapid-fire order Larry Minehan tipped in a follow-through shot to put the Gaels out in front and then Rockwell was fouled again as he tried to score. This time he connected with both free throws and the game ended with the Saints on top by a narrow margin.

C. OF P. HUMBLED

STOCKTON, Feb. 21.—UP— A dynamic finish in the closing minutes of play tonight enabled Fresno State to defeat College of the Pacific, 37 to 33, in the first game of the series which will decide the Far Western basketball championship.

The contest was tied until the last 50 seconds of play, when Warmerdam and Gibb Rambo, forward and center for the Bulldogs, slipped through the defense to score the winning baskets.

Rambo, track and basketball star playing his last season for Fresno, tied with Parsons of the Tigers for scoring honors, each collecting 10 points.

HIGH SCHOOL FIVES DEFEAT FARMER TEAM

Still smarting from the defeat administered them last Friday by Piedmont, the Richmond Union High School basketball team yesterday afternoon trounced the Hayward five by a score of 31 to 28 at the Hayward gymnasium.

The B team made it a perfect day for the locals by defeating the Hayward B club by a score of 30 to 19.

Starting out with a rush the local varsity piled up a lead and at half time left the floor at the long end of an 18 to 15 score.

In the second half the Hayward club put up a strong battle but the superior basket shooting and defense work of the local team brought home the victory.

Boglioto was high man for the locals with 13 points.

The Richmond B squad started out like the well known house afire and led 14 to 11 at half time. In the second half the locals put on the steam and piled up enough points to put the game on ice.

Tetzchner, center, was high man for the Richmond B club with 12 points.

The Richmond varsity lineup was Lewis, and Boglioto, forwards; Milicevich, center; Smith and Quinn guards.

MADIGAN TELLS OF THE GAME HE LIKED BEST

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE, Feb. 21—Ask most of the level-headed men what event they remember most vividly, and two-to-one they'll tell you some game or meet or fight of the past season or two. Seasons in sports are so much alike that the most recent event generally seems the most exciting and most memorable.

Not so in the case of Edward "Slip" Madigan, athletic director and football coach at Saint Mary's College. Slip's answer to interviewers who demand to know his favorite game is always the same—the Saint Mary's-Arizona football game in Tucson in 1928.

It seems that the Gaels were behind in the fourth quarter by a mere 20 to 2 score. With 7 minutes to play, the losers took time out, went into a huddle, and came out with some magical potion, for in those 7 minutes they scored 3 touchdowns and won a 22-20 triumph. Chief magicians were two backfield men now assistant coaches at Moraga—Red Strader and Jimmy Endehill.

Since then Saint Mary's team have proved that history repeats by getting a reputation for second-half comebacks. Other victories of this type which Madigan relishes in memory are those over California in 1931, U. S. C. in 1931 and 1934 and Fordham in 1930.

FARM BILL IS APPROVED IN HOUSE BATTLE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21—UP—The House late today passed the $500,000,000 New Deal farm bill after tumultous debate resulting in defeat of an amendment intended to protect the dairy industry, and sent it to conference with the Senate.

The bill, an outgrowth of the Supreme Court decision invalidating the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, is designed to continue Federal crop control through paying farmers to conserve their soil. Some 25,000,000 to 30,000,000 acres of farm land will be removed from production for restoration of its fertility.

BITTER FIGHT

The biggest fight on the new program came when Representative Gerald J. Boileau, Progressive, Wisconsin, offered an amendment prohibiting payment of benefits to any farmer pasturing livestock or dairy cattle on land retired from soil conservation. His fight was based on the dairy industry's fear that a great increase in production will result from use of the otherwise idle land.

A similar bill was passed by the Senate last Saturday. It embodies a two-year program for retiring farm land for soil empovement. Farmers who heed the suggestions of Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace on the use of their land will receive cash benefits, as under the AAA, except that there will be no written contract with the government.

PERMANENT PROGRAM

It also provides a permanent program based on Federal aid to states which set up their own farm production control plans. The permanent program will take effect as fast as states set up their own control laws, and will entirely replace the temporary program on January 1, 1938.

The House made necessary a conference with the Senate when it substituted its own bill for the one the Senate passed. Then it amended its own bill into conformity with the Senate measure in several points, and added new amendments.

Guarantees Are Reestablished By President

CARACAS, Venezuela, Feb. 21—UP—President Eleazar Lopez Contreras tonight ordered re-establishment of all civil guarantees.

They were suspended January 6, as result of widespread vandalism and rioting which followed the death in December of General Juan Vicente Gomez, Venezuela's dictator for 27 years.

After the recent slaying of civilians when soldiers stationed on the balcony of Caracas government house fired on a demonstration in the Plaza Bolivar, the Students Federation demanded that the president immediately re-establish constitutional guarantees.

The president promised he would as soon as national excitement had quieted.

BRITISH DESIGN WONDER TRAIN

BATH, Eng., Feb. 21—UP—The "perfect train" of the future is being developed here in the world's first centralized railroad laboratory to meet the challenge of Diesel-engine transportation.

Great Britain's "wonder train," according to research officials of the London, Scottish and Midlands Railroad, will be steam propelled—a modern version of the old "iron horse"—and will contain the latest developments of speed, comfort and economy in operation.

The train will be ultra-modern in its streamlining, almost "bumpless" and completely fire-resistant according to these research workers.

AIM AT 100-MILE SPEED

The work is being carried along on the theory that the new train must travel at a speed of not less than 100 miles an hour. It has been established that a normal six-coach train traveling at 100 miles an hour uses up 1,332 horsepower in overcoming wind resistance.

The same train, streamlined in accordance with the scale used in miniature models inserted in a wind tunnel, required only 336 horsepower for resistance, a saving of nearly 1,000 horsepower. A 30 percent reduction in resistance to side winds also has been attained by fitting scoop-like screens to the undercarriage of coaches.

In evolving the "perfect train" the L. M. S. officials built a "standing-up-and-sitting-down" machine which registers the wear and tear on coach upholstery of passengers' arising and sitting down. The effects of a year's wear can be determined in two weeks.

Another device charts the effects of years of rust on metal parts, all within the space of a week or two.

Other developments of the laboratory include:

A "cloth paint" which gives wood the soft "feel" and appearance of artificial silk or cotton.

A formula to reproduce on metal the delicate grains of the rarest woods—a development to be extensively used in the decoration of steel fireproof and collapse-proof coaches.

A "weatherometer" which reproduces British climate and puts paintwork through a full year of rain, sunshine, heat and cold in the course of five weeks.

The "jolts" of a train are being studied by slow motion pictures, taken with movie cameras attached to periscopes projected down through the carriage floor while the train is traveling at high speed.

House Adrift At Sea May Be 'Shipwrecked'

ASTORIA, Ore., Feb. 21—UP—August Fisher's two-story dwelling pitched on a barge, anchored two miles out in the Pacific tonight, appeared imminently ready to join the beach community of Ocean Park Wash.

There was nothing Fisher could do about. He interviewed the owners of every tug in port. They smiled in sympathy, but refused to take their craft to sea in the teeth of a rising wind and the forecast of gales.

Fisher lashed his big house on a barge at Ilwaco Wednesday and started for South Bend, on Willapa Bay, Wash. Two gasoline launches towed the dwelling.

The launches were out of gas and a 30-mile wind was driving the flotilla toward the beach Thursday when the Coast Guard went to the rescue. Guardsmen anchored the house, took Fisher from his front porch, and towed the launches to port.

Today's Safe Driving Hint

By The National Safety Council

DRIVING IN 'DESERTED' AREAS

One of the greatest mistakes a driver can make is to get the idea that he can safely speed on city streets in the wee small hours when streets are apparently deserted.

The same principle holds true during the day in sparsely traveled residential districts. You approach an intersection and if you know there is little travel on the cross street you are tempted to go thru without diminishing your speed. The fact that you can do this repeatedly without mishap increases your confidence. But some day another car will be coming along that cross street and you will be unable to stop in time to avoid a smashup.

When danger seems most remote —beware!

JEAN HARLOW FEATURED ON SUNDAY BILL

Jean Harlow, presenting a new personality, topped by "honey-brown" hair, stars on the new, selected two-bit program that begins at the Fox theater tomorrow.

"Riffraff" a down-to-earth drama of emotions offers Miss Harlow a splendid opportunity for her talents and presents Spencer Tracy in the role of her new leading man.

It is the story of a "guy" and a "gal"—elemental, vital, earthly people. They live and work on the waterfront and that is their world. What they lack is book education they make up in wisdom taught in the World's greatest school—the streets. This is a love story without a word of love, a romance as savagely elemental as the environment in which it takes place.

Una Merkel, Joseph Calleia, Mickey Rooney and others are in the supporting cast.

The second picture on the program offers Jessie Matthews, "The Dancing Divinity" in a tuneful dancing romance called "First a Boy."

Five new song hits are offered. They are: "Everything's in Rhythm With My Heart," "Half and Half," "Say the Word," "The Little Silkworm" and I Can Wiggle My Ears".

Victor McLaglen and Freddie Bartholomew in "Professional Soldier" plus "The Murder of Doctor Harrigan" starring Ricardo Cortez and Mary Astor, are the two features playing at the Fox for the last times today. Because of this gala Washington Birthday program the Fox will run continuously from 1 to 11 P. M. today.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—The Secret Service is taking extra precautions for the visit of the President to the Fly Club at Harvard tomorrow.

Not many people know it, but last year when the President attended the Fly Club dinner, he was "bombed."

The "bombing" took place when the President's car drew up in Holyoke Place, a blind street which ends at the main gate to Lowell House, and on which the Fly Club is located.

A student in a top-floor room of Lowell House dropped several toy torpedoes into the street. They landed about 100 feet from the President's car, making a loud popping noise.

Secret Service men on the running board of the car drew their revolvers, and police rushed into Lowell House. The student was found, collared, lectured and released.

KITCHEN INSPECTED

All this happened even though 500 Boston police and 110 Cambridge police—the heaviest guard that has ever been posted for a president in New England—were on duty.

Police were stationed every forty feet along the route of the car from the railroad yards to Cambridge. Plainclothes men were in the windows of all buildings overlooking Holyoke Place, while two local police guarded a vacant building—one inside and one out—for two days before the President arrived.

This year, the vacant buildings have been torn down and offer no problem to the Secret Service. However, about twenty Secret Service men arrived in Cambridge a week in advance to "sniff" around the premises and make all arrangements with Charles R. Apted, chief of the Harvard Yard police.

They are also going through the rigmarole of inspecting the kitchen where the President's food is to be cooked—a precaution also carried out for Coolidge. Police and sanity records of the cooks also are being investigated.

THE FLY CLUB

The Fly Club, of which the President and his sons are members, was founded in 1836 under the name Alpha Delta Phi. No one knows where it picked up the name "Fly."

Last year, while the President was in the Club, the members of the rival Phoenix Club, also initiating that night, came around and sang risque songs under the windows of the Fly Club, as is customary, without regard to the 1,000 or more people congregated there to watch the President's departure.

Secret Service men are a little stumped as to how, or if, they should try to prevent repetition of this unwanted serenade.

NEW CHERRY TREES

George Washington will soon have a new crop of cherry trees at his shrine in Fredericksburg, Va. In this case, however, they will be "Bred in Japan."

A delegation from the Fredericksburg Chamber of Commerce recently visited Japanese Ambassador Saito to ask his aid in securing Japan's famous pink-blossomed cherry trees to beautify the George Washington shrine at Fredericksburg.

Ambassador Saito promised to get 100 trees.

"But," he added, as if just remembering something, "your Government forbids the importation of plants from the Orient. There is a quarantine, I believe.

"Nevertheless," continued the Ambassador, apparently enjoying the look of disappointment on the faces of the delegates, 'I think I know how to avoid that. We have several nurseries in this country. I will request that they supply the trees for you."

NRA AFTERMATH

Probably the most important question arising out of the termination of the NRA is whether its demise has brought an increase in sweated labor.

To answer this question the President appointed a committee of experts. It was to study the pay scales and work-hours, and what changes had taken place in them since the end of the Blue Eagle.

A few weeks ago, the committee brought in its report. It showed a general lengthening of hours, slashing of pay, and a very considerable increase in child labor.

The report was sent to the White House, where it fell into the hands of Marvin McIntyre. That was the nearest it got to the President. McIntyre sent it to his good friend "Uncle Dan" Roper. He took one look, then ducked.

Several days went by and Major George Berry, Coordinator for Industrial Recovery, got wind of the report. He made inquiries at the Labor Department, expecting that it would be sent there as the agency directly concerned with such matters.

The Labor Department informed Berry it had not received the report, that McIntyre had taken it upon himself to send it to Roper.

EVASIVE ROPER

So Berry went direct to the President, and asked to be allowed to see the document. The President assured him he could do so, that he would give instructions to this effect.

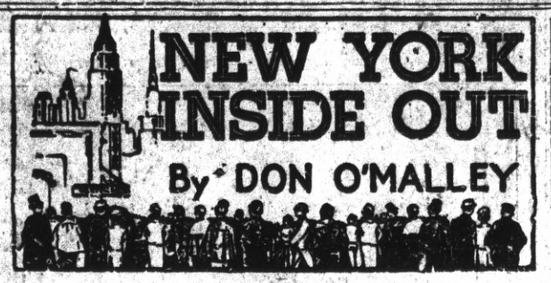
A week went by and nothing was heard from Roper. Then a newsman tipped off about the report, asked Roper about it.

"Oh," he replied airily, "it is unimportant."

Administrationites, interested in seeing that the report is made public, felt otherwise. They went to Representative Connery of the House Labor Committee, and told him the story.

"That is just the material I need to help me put over my thirty-hour bill," he said. "I'll get it."

Whether he does remains to be seen. He has written Roper a letter requesting the report. If Roper refuses to come across, Connery plans to offer a resolution in the House putting the Secretary of Commerce on the spot.



NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—The Museum of Modern Art has pulled off a canny bit of showmanship with its programs of old movies. The historic masterpieces of the early flicker days are accompanied by popular musical favorites such as "Day Dreams," "A Bicycle For Two" and "My Gal Sal" knocked out on a tinny piano, and the audience response is sure-fire.—A hint for social clubs.—Battling Bob Moses, the crusading park commissioner, has just won another point in his campaign to oust the Central Park Casino. The Appellate court has ruled in his favor, and it won't be long now before the kids are roller skating in the new rink that will replace the snooty restaurant.—Fred Stone's three acting daughters are also his private secretaries. Sometimes Dorothy, Paula and Carol make conflicting dates for papa, and then there's a family upheaval to pay.—All of the singers in the California Varsity Eight, audible in the current "Follies," are college graduates. Songbirds of Depression, I take it.—That pretty girl who plays the big double-bass fiddle in the Hotel Lincoln's Tavern is still the most amazing vision to be seen on the Midway.

BUSMAN—The Radio Announcer At Home: "Good evening, wife and kiddies.—ah, I see that dinner is ready to be served. The maid is now coming into the dining room with the cocktails, which are in one of the handsome shakers distributed free of charge by the United Embalmers' Club. The maid is attired in a new close-fitting black outfit which certainly shows her off to advantage. She is, I would say, in excellent form tonight. The maid is pouring the first cocktail. Please stand by. These cocktails are great, believe you me. The maid is now pouring another. Please stand by. And another. And another! Oh boy, please stand by—Ah, there is a surprise for us this evening—shad roe and bacon. My wife says this comes through the courtesy of the man next door, who went fishing. Please stand by—Well, my little son has just shoved his plate off the table. Fortunately, it didn't break, as it is a product of the Wear and Tear Manufacturing Company of Yuma, Arizona, with branches in all principal cities. Remember their slogan: One of our plates will outlast three husbands.—This meal has just been brought to a close by bisque tortoni. We will appreciate hearing from all who might have enjoyed it. Goodnight!"

DUBBED—Actor folks are chummy people. Lately they've taken to dubbing the producers with all sorts of fancy sobriquets. If you want to be in the know, then, here are some of the monickers as applied to the upper fraternity:

Mr. Gordon is known as Migratory Max. Billy Rose is the Mighty Midget, and Courtney Burr the Admiring Admiral. Jed Harris is the first and original Wonder Boy. Alex Yokel is the Itinerant Equestrian. Crosby Gaige answers to the Peekskill Pasteur. You know G. M. Cohan, of course, as the Song and Dance Man. Katharine Cornell is fighting hard for title to the First Lady. Al Woods, recently returned to the ranks of the successful, is the Sweetheart of the Stem—Stop, pal—my heart is breaking.

BLOTS—The new shows have been pretty tough going. With the season's end in sight, producers are beginning to dump all kinds of miscarriages on the market, hoping to snatch some of the box-office receipts before they vanish into the dry summer air.

I've had some dismal evenings as a result. An incredibly stale doughnut called "Among Those Sailing" opened to audible snickers the other night. Has to do with a forgotten Viennese affair which bobs up to threaten a happy marriage. "Co-Respondent Unknown," all about fraudulent divorce, would be a completely intolerable bedroom bore if not for Peggy Conklin's juicy part. Margaret Anglin does some feeble acting in a ham play called "Fresh Fields." This one ran for months in London, but don't ask me to explain British humor.

If these are still playing when you get to town, my advice is to stay away.

One Christmas Eve

by Ruth Louise Ayers

It is Christmas Eve on Houseboat Row, squalid river colony. Big Adam, evangelist, holds services in his houseboat Mission, little knowing that his son Dan, lured by two crooks, has got into serious trouble and is hiding from the police at Luke Conners' floating bar, down the Row. Luke's daughter Nightingale, expecting a visit from the wealthy Vincent Rocke, whom she loves, sends Joe Jarvis with a note to tell him not to come. But Vincent is already on his way. Shortly after he reaches the Conners boat, police come to arrest Dan. Meanwhile, while Joe is off on his errand, old Katie Jarvis, his wife, who took to drink when their son Leslie was sent to prison years before, has had a drop too much and embarks in a skiff on a crazy journey down the river toward the prison. Joe has never had the courage to tell her that Lester was electrocuted long ago.

CHAPTER XXVI

JOE JARVIS was at last on his way home from his errand to the Rocke mansion. He had taken a long time about it.

When he had been told at the servants' door that Vincent Rocke had just left, he had stood there foolishly, twisting Nightingale's note in his hand, uncertain what to do, remembering that she had said to deliver it to Vincent in person.

The butler, whose ankles were cold in the wind, had lifted superior eyebrows.

"If there's anything I can do for you—"

"Nothing," Joe had said, "unless you'd let me come into the kitchen for a minute. Seems like the walk up the hill has taken the breath clean out of me."

THE butler had hesitated. Then, deciding it was all right, since the fellow had come with a note for Mr. Vincent, he had opened the door wide and invited Joe in.

Joe had blinked at the dazzling whiteness of the room. The stove, the sink, the cupboards — everything was a shining, spotless white.

"Nice place." That was about all Joe had been able to think of saying.

The butler had nodded, and had asked if he might serve Joe a cup of tea. Then, for half an hour Joe had sat there, gratefully sipping tea and munching bread and jam.

When he had been ready to go, the butler had inquired. "What about the note?"

Joe had felt the note, secure in his pocket.

"No, I guess I better not. The young lady said, 'Joe, don't give it to no one except Vincent Rocke'."

THE kitchen clock had said almost ten o'clock when he had finally begun the walk back home. Time meant little to him, and he reckoned it would take only a few minutes to return down the hill.

But as he drew his thin coat about him and started down the long driveway, the cold wind buffeted him, and snow glazed the ground, making the going slow and difficult.

When he finally reached the foot of the hill, he was trembling from the exertion. He had reached a small triangular park plot where the city had put benches as a look-out over the river. It was cold, but Joe's legs would carry him no farther until he had rested a bit. He slumped down on a bench.

From where he sat he could see the dim outline of Houseboat Row. He picked out his own small home. For as many years as he could remember, Joe had lived in a houseboat—from one to another, until he and Katie had moved to the colony within his vision now.

His thoughts wandered back into the past, and Katie as she was when they had set up housekeeping on their first boat on the Ohio. She had been so pretty then—so fresh and young. Who would have thought then that she. . . .

HE CAME back sharply to the present. "I tried to ask Big Adam to pray for her tonight," he muttered. "I want him to save Katie. But there wasn't a good chance tonight. Maybe tomorrow. Christmas, I can drop around to his house and ask him, private like."

His eyes lighted. "Wouldn't it be fine," he thought. "if Katie and me could sit across the table nights, me reading the Bible to her. . . ." And if she had religion to comfort her, then maybe he could tell her at last about Les. With her drinking the way she did, with her eyes always staring at Lester's picture on the wall, he couldn't get the courage to tell her.

He stood up suddenly and left the park. As he turned into the river road, he dimly made out a lone skiff, tossed by the wind, going rapidly downstream. His eyes squinted.

"Who'd be such a fool as to try rowing down river on a night like this?" he thought.

ENTERING his houseboat, Joe called to Katie. She did not answer. Then he saw their old trunk open, clothes scattered on the floor, with a pair of Lester's baby shoes on top of the heap.

"Katie!" he shouted. "What for you been unpacking?"

There was no answer. He looked for her in the adjoining room, then returned to the kitchen and reached into the cupboard where she kept the whisky hidden. There was a bottle there, but only a nip or two was gone from it. Joe felt easier then. She could not have grown tipsy on so small an amount. Probably she had gone uptown to shop.

He opened the bread box and, taking out a crust, poured milk over it in the cat's saucer. "Tiger," he coaxed, "come out and get your snack." The cat, curled under the stove, arched its back and, yawning, padded indifferently to the saucer.

When Tiger had eaten, Joe decided to walk outside and perhaps meet Katie on her return. But there was no sign of her, and the wind, lashing at him, soon sent him, shivering, back to his boat.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

(By MRS. CARL W. LONGACRE)

THE RIDE WITH DEATH
(A true story of a recent tragedy)

Garry slumped in his chair with a dizzy head. He drank cocktail after cocktail.

He had ceased to "trip the light fantastic" with the other dancers. Since his feet had become so clumsy, he had not much control over them, due to the numberless cocktails he had drank since the party had begun earlier in the evening.

Mary had not wanted to come to the cocktail party, although Mary was not an abstainer herself, by any means; however the past few months she was becoming alarmed over Garry's increasing thirst for liquor. Too often recently he had come home in the wee small hours of the morning, either accompanied by a friend or brought in by some kindly policeman.

Mary had begged Garry soon after midnight to get their car and take her home, but each time he had laughingly refused her request. He knew why Mary was becoming anxious. Just a few weeks ago as they were returning from a cocktail party, his hand had been so unsteady on the wheel that there had been a crash on the highway and they had barely escaped death. He had promised Mary then that he would reform, but habit and appetite always got the best of him. He knew he was slipping fast, but had entirely lost the will to resist.

Garry had been an ardent supporter for the repeal of prohibition. He was one who believed in "personal liberty."

He had always boasted (as many others do to their sorrow) that he could "drink or he could leave it alone." His proud boast had been —"I shall stick to the amount I can carry."

But alas, he was fast becoming an almost habitual drunkard with no power of himself to stop.

The hours went by, most of the revelers had long since gone home.

The music had ceased. Garry was awakened from his stupor by Mary and their host insisting that Garry come with them to the car. Garry roused in a rage at Mary, for asking their host to drive them home. Was Mary afraid of his drinking? He smiled craftily "I'll show them I CON drive my own car, and I'll prove to them 'death does not ride with a drunken driver as those signs along the highway proclaim'."

Garry got, unsteadily to his feet and lurched with a swagger to the parked car and despite their entreaties took his seat at the wheel for the drive home.

His host after a word with Mary said, "I'm seeing you safely home Garry and got in the car with them."

The night wind, cool on his face, had a sobering effect, at first on Garry and he drove slowly and carefully.

But in spite of his efforts to keep awake, Garry began to be drowsy again and his foot pressed harder on the gas as he crouched over the wheel. Faster and faster the car sped on. Mary was terrified with fear.

Their host could do nothing to dissuade Garry from driving. The speedometer registered 60, then 75. A curve was just ahead. Garry was now beyond sensing their danger. With a terrific crash the huge car hurtled over the embankment, turned turtle a few times and everything was still.

Garry's crushed body was taken from the wreckage, dead. Mary and his host were taken to a hospital seriously injured.

Poor Garry, had taken his last cocktail, had taken his last ride with death. He had been unable to "take it or leave it alone."

"There is a way that seemeth good to man but the end thereof is death."

AUXILIARY TO DEWEY CAMP HAS VISITORS

A large number of distinguished visitors attended the meeting last night of Admiral Dewey Auxiliary, United Spanish War Veterans held at the Memorial hall.

Clara Fowler, district officer, was an honored guest during the evening's meeting.

Pearl Johnson presided over the business meeting at which time plans were made for a card party to be held some time in March.

A banquet for Auxiliary and Camp was served at conclusion of the meeting.

Both Ousted

RICHARD GODFREY and his 350-pound midget draft horse, Tuffie, occupied a second-story furnished apartment in Los Angeles. That is, until the tenants downstairs complained. Police ousted Godfrey and his horse.

Rancheress

MRS. J. A. MARSHALL, II, wife of the owner of the Pyramid Lake, Nev., dude ranch, is looking forward to her first sight of a dude ranch cowboy. She was swept in a whirlwind courtship from the quiet streets of Wailuku, Hawaii, to the wedding altar in three weeks. An hour later she was aboard the liner Lurline bound for her new broad lands of Nevada.

Hollywood Film Shop

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 21—UP—The film version of Hervey Allen's best seller, "Anthony Adverse" has been completed and everyone associated with the production is willing to swear the job was anything but 'colossal in a small way."

It required one thousand scenes and more film footage than flipped behind the lenses during four months of shooting the next longest job, "A Mid-summer Night's Dream."

An attempt was made to follow the novel closely. The producers declare such strict accuracy was for the sake of art, but off-the-record critics intimated the producers would find themselves lost between the pages if they skipped a chapter.

Giving all for accuracy as Allen traced the life and loves of his hero, set builders worked overtime to bring African jungles, Napoleonic palaces, Italian countrysides, and Early North America to Hollywood.

Members of the cast themselves rather felt the strain of it all. One day Fredric March, who plays the part of the wandering hero, didn't report to work. He had decided to read the book, and after an all-night session flipping the pages, had fainted when he figured out how many more he yet had to turn over.

The picture also caused considerable grief among technicians. Ordinarily cameramen and lighting experts take the scenes in their stride, but trying to create the effects Allen's pen so easily described made them frantic.

Tony Gaudio, for almost 30 years an expert cameraman here, had the assignment of "chief cinematographer" during the filming. When the scene number reached a thousand he gave up. It was just as well, the picture was finished.

Gaudio admits he hasn't read "Anthony Adverse". But he thinks he will go see the picture he photographed.

"After all," he says, "if it was worth a thousand scenes, it ought to be a pretty good story."

Communists In Demonstration Against Il Duce

NEW YORK, Feb. 21—UP—Eight hundred Communist pickets demonstrated before the German, Italian and Japanese consulates here today, protesting against altered preparations by those countries for war on Russia.

More than 150 pickets marched in front of the Italian consulate shouting "Down With Mussolini."

"Smash Hitler's War Plans" the mob in front of the German consulate yelled.

Three hundred paraded before the Japanese consulate.

The picketing was orderly and police attempted no interference.

"Mind" Is Sunday Sermon Subject

In all Christian Science churches, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., a Lesson-Sermon will be read Sunday, February 23 on the subject, "Mind."

The Golden Text will be: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom: and the knowledge of the holy is understanding" (Prov. 9:10). Bible selections will include the following passage from Ps. 94: 9, 10: "He that planted the ear, shall he not hear? he that formed the eye, shall he not see? He that chastiseth the heathen, shall not he correct? he that teacheth man knowledge, shall not he know?"

Passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included, which reads aas follows: "Mind is God . . Intelligence is omniscience, omnipresence, and eternal quality of infinite Mind, of the triune Principle,—Life, Truth, and Love,—named God" (p. 469).

SPAIN MOVES TO HALT RED RIOT SPREAD

MADRID, Feb. 21—UP—The government hurriedly granted amnesty freeing 30,000 political prisoners from scores of jails today as a desperate expedient to stop radical riots and save Spain from possible Bolshevism.

A score of persons have been killed since Sunday's election and more than 100 wounded or injured in nationwide disorders.

Only yesterday Manuel Aanona, the new premier, said amnesty could not be granted before March 16, when the new parliament meets. So grave did the situation become overnight, however, that President Niceto Alcala Zamora today signed and sent to the permanent committee of the Cortes a proclamation of amnesty. The committee, which functions when parliament is not in session, approved it immediately, effective at once.

Authorities, began opening jail doors for the thousands of political prisoners, many of whom had been in prison since shortly after the abortive revolution of October, 1934.

The released prisoners were carried away on the shoulders of friends. Crowds surged through the streets in wild celebration.

Technically, the amnesty proclamation must be published in the official Gazette tomorrow before it becomes law. But in most of the provinces authorities chose not to oppose the clamor of the victorious left wingers for release of their friends and they were released at once.

CATARACTS

Inside the eye we find a transparent lens placed there for the purpose of assisting in focusing light rays upon the retina. This lens somewhat resembles the lens of a telescope except that the lens of the eye is able to focus upon near and far objects merely by changing its shape, whereas the lens of the telescope does not have the same power of self-accommodation. One of the unusual features of the lens is that it has no blood vessels.

The crystalline lens of the human eye must be transparent to do its work and anything which interferes with transparency will reduce its power to function. The lens may develop opacities or opaque spots which cut off the useful light rays. The term cataract is the term used to designate the presence of a condition of opaqueness resulting in a loss of transparency.

The chief cause of cataract is age, inasmuch as the majority of cases occur in patients between the ages of sixty and seventy-five, such cataracts being called senile cataracts or simple cataracts. However, cataract formation may be encouraged in younger patients as the result of diabetes or eye injuries. One of the uncommon causes of cataract formation is glass-blowing, and it is thought that the exposure of the eye to extreme heat and light as occurring in this particular work, results in the type of cataract called "glass-blowers" cataract. I am convinced that in the average case, long-continued eyestrain plays a role in producing cataract; there is also reason to believe that certain systemic diseases may favor the development of cataracts due to an accumulation of toxic irritants.

Cataracts may be referred to as "hard" or "soft" and by hard is meant that a hardened, thickened nucleus has been formed. The hard cataracts usually form in older patients as during the ageing process a more or less natural hardening of the nucleus occurs which must be considered one of the physiological changes occurring with age.

Considerable time is usually required for the full development of a cataract and it may continue to develop only very gradually over a period of several years. In young patients, however, a cataract may develop much more rapidly. Before the senile cataract reaches the mature stage, it goes through a process of "ripening." The patient with this type of cataract must bear in mind that there will occur periods when the progress of the disorder will be quite slow, or when progress may seem arrested and during these periods the patient may believe that he is improving. In spite of the occurrence of these periods when he seems to improve, the general rule is that the cataract will continue to grow gradually worse.

The one developing a cataract will first be alarmed by a partial interference with vision, the impairment becoming more noticeable with time, although complete loss of vision does not occur inasmuch as the patient still keeps his power to perceive light. The patient may notice stationary spots or specks which are different from the black specks so commonly seen in that they do not move around. The patient with a cataract will be able to see better as evening approaches due to the fact that the pupil dilates in the dusk and allows a wider space for admitting light.

It is generally conceded that there are no medicines which are of the slightest value in dissolving a cataract. Once a cataract has developed the only method of treatment is surgical removal. In many instances, operation is successful. The surgeon specializing in removing cataracts is the one to decide what type of operation is to be used and when it shall be performed.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Irritated Eyelids)

Question: K. L. G. writes: "I have been having a good deal of trouble with my eyelids which become itchy and appear inflamed. I would like to have you recommend a remedy."

Answer: It is likely that you have conjunctivitis. There are several different forms, some of which are more serious than others. I suggest that you have the inflamed areas examined, in order to find out the exact cause of the inflammation. If conjunctivitis is found to be present, a suitable solution will be advised for you. Inasmuch as the solutions used, vary with the type of conjunctivitis present, I am unable to give you suggestions regarding local treatment, without examining you. It is quite likely that you have a simple catarrhal inflammation affecting the inside of the lids, and if such is the case, the outlook regarding recovery is excellent.

(Pyelitis)

Question: Horace D. wants to know: "Is there such a thing as pyelitis? Most people are unfamiliar with the term which makes me believe there is another name for it, which is the one popularly used."

Answer: Pyelitis refers to an inflammation of the kidney and its pelvis. One of the characteristic signs of the disease is the presence of pus in the kidney elimination. The common name for the disorder is pus in the kidneys—perhaps this name will be more familiar. The disease may take either an acute or chronic form; sometimes, acute flare-ups will occur in a case otherwise chronic. In this disease, the kidney is invaded by bacteria, the organism most commonly responsible being the colon bacillus. However, the healthy kidney is able to resist infection, provided that liquid freely drains away from it, and therefore, the presence of the organism is not enough to induce inflammation. Some other factor must be present which interferes with normal resistance.

Development of Instruments Great Help in the Treatment of Eye Defects

By CLAUD NORTH CHRISMAN, M.D.

IN YESTERDAY'S column there was a brief reference made to the modern treatment of a detached retina. If that sounds too technical it means the same thing as if you tried to use any picture machine and failed to provide a sheet or screen on which to show the picture. The retina is in the back of the eye and all of our seeing depends upon its good health and the exactness with which it is placed. Some people always see clearly and sharply, noticing every detail and overlooking nothing. Others see confusedly and ineffectively and miss a good deal.

DR. CHRISMAN

When this receiving disc, called the retina, of the eye slips from its fastenings or is misplaced in the slightest degree, we are deprived of the reception of a corresponding lot of impressions. It is in the special field of restoring this tiny plate or disc that eye surgeons are inclined to note the most hopeful advance of all.

And these surgeons want you to recognize also the help of those in other fields than surgery. The brain specialist and neurologist have contributed their research in brain and nerve conditions as concerned with sight.

Affected by Nerves

We never see so clearly or so easily when our heads ache or we are nervously upset.

Another group for whom our appreciation is solicited is of the optical engineers. Maybe you never heard of them. But a recent report speaks of them as insufficiently honored for their services to the conservation and restoration of vision. Without the development and refinement of technical instruments afforded by their cooperation much of the recent progress could not have been made.

Some of the newer types of instruments are those used in measuring certain of the progressive diseases of the optic system. The advance and possible treatment of the dreaded glaucoma is one of this type of trouble. The brain specialists and neurologists who work in the field of brain injuries, and particularly brain tumors, are dependent upon these precision instruments for measuring accurately the behavior of the functions taking place in the eye ball.

A hemorrhage, a clot, or a tumor affecting the optic nerve can thus be recognized early and if treated promptly may often be eliminated and the eye saved. The incidence of squint or cross eye also depends for correction upon instruments of the most exact technical development. The person who has a squint or is cross-eyed has for all practical purposes only one eye.

Eyes Must Agree

To have complete vision one must have both incoming sensory impulses and outgoing motor impulses synthesized and co-ordinated to the pair of organs. This is impossible with malformation of either eye.

The function of the newer optical instruments is to train the defective eye how to see. The difficulty lies either in a restricted muscle that needs to be stretched or in a weakened muscle that should be strengthened.

Even in eyes which are singly capable of perfect vision there may be a slight dissimilarity of image received. Hence the brain, which in the end really does the seeing, is unable to function efficiently in co-ordinating the results.

In all of these cases of defect there are now instruments capable of detecting the extent of the trouble and of providing relief in most cases. Cross eyes come into this listing and the prospects of entire recovery under proper treatment are very hopeful, especially in the instance of young children where treatment is begun early.

Dr. Chrisman offers readers the privilege of addressing questions to him care of this column. He will answer questions of general interest in his regular daily column.

Toscanini Says He's Going Home

By TALBOT LAKE

TOSCANINI, the only man whom musicians agree upon as the greatest conductor in the world—and possibly of all time—Toscanini is going to leave us this spring, never to return. To persons of musical bent this loss is incalculable, and even the many millions who have heard him conduct the New York Philharmonic Orchestra over the radio will miss his unseen presence.

But the Italian maestro says he's tired and wants to be relieved of the great responsibility of directing the destinies of a permanent orchestra. On March 25 he will be sixty-nine, and during recent years he has found the strenuous going a little too much for him. Several times he has been attacked with neuritis in the muscles of his arms, which to a conductor is almost like dying.

So Toscanini leaves America for good, leaving enough memories to fill a book. There was the time when he first came to the Metropolitan Opera House in 1908 to revive that institution's prestige. At the first rehearsal the musicians of the opera orchestra were antagonistic. He then called upon them to play the opening passages of Wagner's "Goetterdammerung" instead of light Italian music. When he began to conduct without a score they were incredulous, but they soon discovered they were in the hands of a master.

Toscanini himself explains his memory because of his near-sightedness—that it was necessary for him to see with his ears. In this manner he remembers every note instantly of about 90 operas, hundreds of symphonic pieces, and about a thousand odds and ends of music.

In 1915 came the famous feud between the director and the manager, Gatti-Casazza, which resulted in Toscanini calling it a day and going back to Italy. In 1926 he began his honorable career with the Philharmonic, and immediately every concert which he conducted was sold out.

Guide to Charm

Face Blemish Calls Mostly For Cleaning

By JACQUELINE HUNT

ONE of the tragic things about youth is that faces which should be fresh and pretty are often marred by blackheads or blemishes of a more serious nature. Blackheads come from lack of cleanliness. This sounds cruel, but it is true. Perhaps it is your skin or perhaps it is something else that needs adjusting.

Stop eating sweets for awhile and try a diet consisting largely of fruit and fruit juice, raw and cooked vegetables, green salads, eggs, milk, and lots of water. You also need plenty of rest for your active body and plenty of opportunity for outdoor games and exercise.

Most essential is cleanliness. If you have blackheads cleanse with a liberal application of cream, wipe off, and apply more. Next dip pads of cotton into hot water and apply it to the blackhead area. When the skin is relaxed and pink work up a good lather with a soft complexion brush and brush the whole face, working with special care over the blemished area. The cream and hot water tend to relax the pores and soften the material that clogs them, while the brushing tends to take it away and stimulates the circulation. Every girl should have a complexion brush.

MISS HUNT

There is no longer an excuse for you not to. The makers of a widely known and truly excellent brand of toilet soap are now giving a small, but pretty and efficient complexion brush, with the purchase of three cakes of soap plus a few cents for mailing. The back is of green plastic, the white bristles firm enough to get at the imbedded grime in a business-like way, yet soft enough not to irritate young skins.

Rinse your face in tepid and then in cool water after the brush cleansing, then study your face in a good hand mirror. Many, or most, of the little grayish specks will be gone. Only the most stubborn will remain, and you can gradually eliminate them.

For the blackheads around the nose press the ugliest ones very, very gently with the fingertips wrapped in a thin piece of cotton. And afterward go over the area with an antiseptic. Always be sure to give this area a little extra scrubbing, for the little creases at the sides of the nose are byways often skipped. Finally tighten the pores and keep the circulation lively by rinsing with ice cold water or skin tonic.

If your skin is sallow and unclear—and it sometimes happens even to young skins—try to find out what causes it. If you have been indulging in too many sweets and ice cream sodas the diet suggestions at the beginning of this column will help. If you have been slack in cleansing methods, then follow the foregoing suggestions once or twice daily and see how quickly your skin improves. Neglect these details and you may develop occasional pimples or a serious case of acne.

Beauty Tips

QUESTION: "My sister and I are both blondes, but we cannot wear the same clothes or cosmetics. My sister can wear red and nearly any bright color, while these shades make my skin look dead and uninteresting. My skin is a little fairer than hers and my hair just a shade lighter. Can you suggest some good colors of make-up and clothes for me?—Twins."

With the subtle tones of your eyes, skin and hair you will have to be content with delicate colors. Pale greens, soft coral, blues, orchid, white and ivory will flatter your fair skin and coloring. If you insist on having one dark, practical outfit, choose navy blue and wear it with liberal touches of white. A soft cream powder, a subtle rose rouge and lipstick, brown eyebrow pencil and a silvery blue or green eye shadow will give just enough accent to your delicate coloring.

Massage cold cream into your eyebrows before tweezing them. Brush them into place and then tweeze the hairs that fall outside of the natural line. It's easier to pull out the hairs and it is also easier to get a clear-cut line.

When touching up your manicure in a hurry use a nail white pencil both for cleansing and whitening your nail tips. It saves the extra operation of using the orange stick.

Making Milk Sour

Don't despair if the recipe calls for sour milk and the only kind you have on hand is fresh milk. Add one-fourth cup of lemon juice to one cup of sweet fresh milk or evaporated milk and the milk will sour suitably for use in cooking.

Short Cuts

Mildewed cotton shower curtains may be bleached by soaking in Javelle water. (Never use Javelle water on silk, or wool, or any colored goods.) Rinse thoroughly after using a bleach, and be sure to store these poisonous chemicals where children cannot get at them.

Leather covered furnishings should be rubbed over with liquid wax about every six months. Before doing this, wring a cloth out in warm sudsy water and go over the leather.

Sheets 108 inches long are amply long for the average sized bed.

The best way to dampen cottons for ironing is by sprinkling them with warm water, using a whisk broom. The whisk broom distributes the moisture evenly.

Embroidery Is Back

The wide cuff embroidery collar and large sleeve puffs on Diana Gibson's navy blue street frock, are an outstanding mode for early spring. Tie and belt of crepe, and blue suede pumps are added touches.

Pastel Shade on Another Lovely on Dance Floors

By IRENE VAIL

New York — In passing let me mention fashion approves the effective habit of veiling one fabric or color with another, or of superimposing one lovely pastel shade over another. Picture for yourself the charm of dance floors, both here and in communities where dancing under the stars may be enjoyed even in winter. One gets an immediate impression of bouquets, since the fluttery type of dance frock calls for flower detail, just as it calls for an animated flower-in-the-breeze sort of silhouette. If, however, you have become addicted to the dinner suit, you might be repaid to look at lace from that angle, the stiffer laces, or the sort that appear for berumed shirt fronts.

In order to stimulate an interest in a certain color, fabric, or period the haute couture long ago established the profitable custom of holding a ball at the Paris Opera for such purpose, the costumes to be keyed to the note it was their intention to accent.

The Velvet Ball and the Lace Ball have been instrumental in performing a similar service in America, and are now annual fashion events. Lace seems to lend itself most graciously to the idea of carrying one fabric throughout the entire evening, for decor and for costumes. Especially does this seem so because there are so many varieties of lace and so many lovely colors in which it may be had. It also lends itself obligingly to several silhouettes even the tailored, since various processes have been perfected by which lace is given whatever stiffness is deemed necessary. And visualize if you can a quardrille danced by lovely ladies costumed in 1860 dresses fashioned of lace. Picture a promenade of lace clad mannequins and movie stars whose dresses are designed by Paris, London, New York and Hollywood artists, and then have any doubts, if you can, about the immediate future of lace.

Quick Work

Within 48 hours after President Roosevelt signed the Deficiency Appropriation Act—which included the first Congressional appropriation to the Social Security Board — United States Treasury checks representing the first social security grants to states for assistance in their aid to the aged, the blind, and to dependent children, were in the mails.

Modes and Manners

QUESTION: "Please tell me the correct way to dispose of chewing gum?—H. J."

ANSWER: When one is offered a stick of chewing gum it is a good idea to save the wrapping paper for this purpose by tucking it into your bag, if you happen to be a woman, or into a pocket, if a man. Then you can dispose of it neatly after enjoying a chew, directly from the mouth to the wrapper.

QUESTION: "Just what is the difference between just plain tea and 'high tea'?—Mrs. E. D."

ANSWER: The guests may sit down to talk for high tea, which is in the nature of a light supper. This form of entertainment is very popular for Sunday evening. High tea may be served between four and six. Usually a salad, hot muffins, preserves and some beverage is served. Or one may have hot or jellied consomme, cold cuts and potato salad or fried chicken. At an ordinary four or five o'clock tea just sweets and dainty sandwiches are served either with tea or coffee.

MODERN WOMEN

The Thesis Here Is That Men Are All Spoiled, And Therefore Selfish

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

MEN are spoiled creatures. That's not news. Nor is it news that women have made them so.

My mail bag this morning is full of laments largely based on the selfishness of man. We have room to take up only two cases, both of which prove conclusively that even though women do the pursuing, men continue to do just as they please.

"Dear Mrs. Martin: What do you think of a husband who takes his wife out to a dance and never asks her to dance? Instead, he dances with all the other women and lets me sit there until I finally asked him to dance with me. I think he's a pretty selfish sort, and told him so. We never go out except with a party, so you can see how attentive my husband is. When we are home he is always reading the paper or doing puzzles. I'm a bit fed up with my own society. Wouldn't you be?

"Good Looking."

MRS. MARTIN

There is no particular reason for you to be annoyed with your husband for not asking you to dance under the circumstances you mention. He probably did you the homage of thinking the other men in the party would be glad to dance with you and that you would get quite a thrill out of their attention.

Going the Rounds

He also probably was operating on the old theory that a man was expected to ask all the ladies in his party to dance, so, unless he confined his attention to one woman, even though he seemed to neglect you, I cannot see that you have much cause to complain.

It sometimes happens that husbands and wives make most unhappy dancing partners, no matter how happy they may really be. Why this should be has puzzled wiser heads than mine, but it is so nevertheless. I think you are magnifying the whole episode.

The next time you go to a party try your wiles on the other men present; the role of wallflower is one of the most heart-breaking a woman has to play. Probably you are self-conscious or forbidding in manner. Your success with other men will attract your husband far quicker than any curtain lecture possibly could.

As for your quiet evenings at home. Be patient, do not begrudge a tired man the form of relaxation he seeks. He does sound selfish, I will admit. Maybe he just isn't a conversationalist. Why not interest yourself in his puzzles or in some games you can play together—cribbage, checkers, chess, card games for two? Anything that will draw you nearer instead of further apart.

Those Modern Girls!

"My dear Mrs. Martin: I am a mother of two sons, both of marriageable age, and I must say I get disgusted with girls. Our telephone is constantly ringing, always some girl trying 'to date them up,' as they call it. No wonder they don't seem in a hurry to marry. I don't think girls go the right way about attracting men. I am sure my sons just pick and choose from the dates these girls suggest. They are spoiled, of course. So far as I can find out from other mothers, the girls do all the dating now. Do you approve of this?—No Daughters."

Whether or not I approve is beside the point. It is being done. Girls are telephoning men, offering this suggestion or that, and men are getting pretty spoiled and pretty choosey.

Under cross-examination some of them admit they prefer to do their own phoning. Others tell you frankly they like to have girls call them because then they know where they stand, I wonder.

I doubt very much if girls really like to take the initiative. I suspect they are forced into taking it by other and less sensitive girls who are of the go-getter type. Competition is pitifully keen. There are always more girls than men, so, they argue, we must do something in order to avoid the dreary fate of the dateless girl. One can only pity them. I am sure they mean no harm and perhaps have to screw up their courage before dropping that fateful nickel in the slot.

Naturally, a girl is a fool who keeps on throwing good nickels after bad. A man might have a good excuse once or even twice, but when he doesn't show any signs of life at all, she is just wasting her time and her money on him. In all probability she is on a busy line, as far as he is concerned.

Don't worry about your sons, they are able to take care of themselves. Men are extraordinarily expert in the gentle art of dodging. I do not imagine any of these enterprising young women will succeed in making them do anything they really do not want to do.

Mrs. Martin will be glad to answer in this column questions of general interest. Mrs. Martin cannot reply individually to every correspondent. Names will not be published. Address her care of this paper.

You and Your Child

Chlid Is Impressed by Unexpected Reward

By JANE HERBERT GOWARD

ROBERT'S mother did something very clever recently. Her six-year-old boy is a very poor eater. But one day he ate his dinner without giving her any trouble and with good appetite apparently. Maybe Robert was hungrier than usual on the day referred to. Or it may simply have been an accident. That is, his daydreaming may have carried him away so far from reality, that without realizing what he was doing he ate everything set before him. The boy's mother was delighted with the result. She praised him highly.

MRS. GOWARD

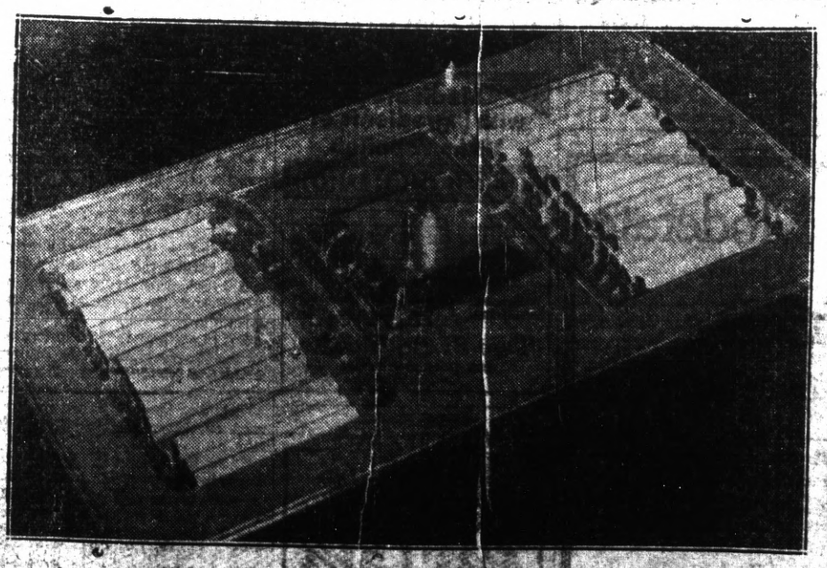
The next day, however, Robert was back at his old trick again, mooning over the dinner plate, while his hand, like an unrelated member, used the fork for toying with the food. Mother had an urge to tell him to "Eat, Robert," but restrained it. She was genuinely puzzled. Why should he eat well one day and not the other?

While shopping downtown later that day, it suddenly struck her as unreasonable to expect a child to change all at once. The child had eaten well once. From time to time this happened, whether from accident or other causes. And here she was building up false hope, expecting a permanent change of habit to take place. "How foolish of me," she thought. Pausing before a toy shop window, she decided to get a gift to celebrate Robert's success at eating dinner yesterday, and to ignore his failure to do the same today.

Children love surprises and are always impressed by them. Robert was completely astonished at receiving a gift because it pleased mother to remember that he had given a fine performance at the dinner table yesterday. He blushed; he stammered; he did not quite know how to thank his mother. That night he did not have to be reminded to eat his supper. He did it with special pride.

The unexpected reward is about as flattering a tribute as one can pay a child. It invariably gets results. Remember to try it some time.

OLD-TIME SPIRIT LAMP



A most important part of dinner is the after-dinner smoke and it is an essential of sophisticated entertaining. Thus, this sterling silver cigarette tray, with spirit lamp attached. Trays are to be had in various shapes and sizes and in plain or hammered silver.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go
If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.
For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement don't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.
If this bile is not flowing freely, your food don't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul. Your skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.
It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.
But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

LINDY CASE CONNECTION IS DENIED

he had certain information about Hauptmann.

IS QUESTIONED

Sheriff Jackson questioned Witten for two hours tonight in a steel barred cell at the county jail. He said:

"Witten admitted he entered this country illegally, but he did not say anything that would clear up the reports of his connection with Hauptmann."

FACES CHARGES

Witten was described in the police report as "slight, with brown hair, weight about 155 pounds, five feet, 10 inches tall". He had little money on his person or in his home when he was taken in custody.

Sheriff Jackson said it was "possible" Witten would be charged under the immigration laws, in order to hold him until a complete investigation of his movements since he entered the United States could be made.

LOOKS LIKE BRUNO

He had no passport or document proving the time or legality of his entry into the country, however.

Sheriff Jackson said although Witten looks "something like Hauptmann" and resembles the picture of the man who supposedly gave information to the "Rev. Mr. Burns", he did not believe he was in any way connected with the Lindbergh case.

Witten said he entered the United States April 13, 1929, aboard the German liner Berlin, landing at New York. He went directly to Chicago, and later came to California "but never stopped in New Jersey," he said.

He said he was in San Francisco in 1931 and 1932, during the time of the Lindbergh kidnaping, and later came to Hollywood.

He is at present employed on a WPA construction project, making artificial sea shell ashtrays.

ern California and dismiss as negligible the revenue the northern part of the state derives from the same source.

Personally we had fallen into the error, and doubtless would have continued in our state of benighted misunderstanding, had we not picked up on our desk yesterday the thirteenth annual report of Californians Inc. It is a most interesting document.

From it we learned that the tourist is the second greatest crop that produces in abundance in these parts.

Did you know—I did not—that 1,042,720 out state visitors spent $66,686,755 in northern and central California in 1935? And that that sum was within a few dollars of the combined amount received by growers for grapes of all kinds, raisins, peaches, pears, prunes and walnuts, namely $66,789,000?

But the remarkable thing is that the result was achieved with a $100,000 advertising fund and a force of only six persons and one part-time stenographer—surely a noteworthy achievement.

We are in thorough accord with the aims and objectives of California Inc. for a bigger tourist crop each succeeding year, for it is one crop that always yields profitable returns.

Jury Inspects The Scene Of Death Crash

ber. He had taken several drinks but was driving in his usual careful manner, she said.

Mrs. Faria said Andrus began to pass a machine ahead of them, then when he saw the Christensen car approaching, got back in his own lane. She told the jury the Christensen machine was in the right hand lane, occupied by the Andrus machine, when the crash occurred.

VIEWS SCENE

Melvin Myatt, investigator for District Attorney Francis P. Healey was called to the stand but before his testimony started attorneys agreed that the jury should go to the scene of the accident.

Court Bailiff Frank Wilson left at noon and took the jury to Garritty Flat, west of Pinole, where the wreck occurred.

E. A. Lawrence, whose car was following the Andrus' machine, told the jury that before leaving Rodeo, Andrus refused a drink. Then several members of his party and Andrus went into a bar, but he said he did not know whether Andrus had anything to drink. He said that when he came upon the scene of the accident, Andrus' automobile was in the right hand lane, and the Christensen car was across the highway and a skid mark led from Andrus' machine. He then took one of the men who was in the Andrus machine to Richmond.

The next witness was Elmer W. Bradshaw, guard at the Standard Oil tank farm. He said that Lawrence stopped at his station and phoned for an ambulance and that he then went to the scene of the accident. He said in his opinion Andrus was under the influence of liquor.

San Quentin Head Quits During Probe

ad, the Prison Board is continuing its inquiry into the counterfeiting operations which now involve seven men and possibly others, the majority of whom are behind or have been behind prison walls. The inquiry yesterday turned to the purchase of prison supplies and the methods used to get counterfeit $10 bills from the prison printing plant to the outside confederates.

In this connection board members said a representative of a San Francisco photo supply house who had ready access to the prison would be questioned. Secret Service men here yesterday revealed that 17 persons in all, including several women were being questioned regarding the plot. Nine of the 17 are convicts. The other eight are not confined in prison.

HELD AS DUPES

It was indicated that many were innocent dupes, and were "used" by the convict ring to dispose of $10,000 in bills after they were engraved on the prison convict plant. Captain Thomas B. Foster, head of the secret service, said that evidence in his hands tends to show that prison guards or civilians were involved in gang operations, in smuggling the counterfeit money outside the wall for circulation.

Jack Loretto, "shover" for the gang, whose job was to pass the notes, is under arrest at Seattle. He has confessed, authorities say, to being given thousands of dollars worth of the spurious bills. The man who engraved the bills, Jack Lewis, Los Angeles robber, of the prison identification bureau, has turned State's evidence against the others.

STORY WON'T HOLD WATER

RENO, Feb. 21.—UP—Preston L. Shobe, public accountant and Coast theatrical producer, will be returned this afternoon to Salinas, Calif., to face charges of embezzling $20,000 from Martha W. Wolter of Carmel Valley.

Deputy Sheriff D. F. McKinnon of Monterey county, who arrived in Reno last night with a warrant, will return Shobe by train. Shobe waived extradition and told Police Chief Lou Gammell of Reno he wished to plead guilty to the charges because "no one would believe my story."

"I'll take the rap," Shobe said. "When I get out of jail I'll repay the money and settle the score with the man who got the money and left me holding the sack.'

The 39 year old producer, who revived "The Drunkard" in Los Angeles, San Diego and San Francisco, said he had been entrusted with $20,000 by Mrs. Wolter to invest in Illinois real estate, but she later agreed to invest it in a Los Angeles show house.

Shobe said he gave the money to a man named "Hawthorne," who disappeared. Shobe pursued him to Reno, where he said he was beaten and thrown to a sidewalk with his money and papers missing.

writing desk where the money was kept, but the family parrot screamed, warning the elderly lady.

Stettler then picked up a hammer and smashed Mrs. Barbour over the head twice, he said. He opened the cage and killed the parrot with the same hammer. After killing the old woman, Stettler waited two hours until her husband returned and as he entered, struck him down, then placed both bodies on a bed.

Realizing he would have to cover the crime, he went to his car for a can of gasoline and sprinkled the bodies with gasoline. He said he went home and constructed the watch and electric heater that set off the flames.

In his home tonight police found a blood-stained leather jacket he had used to wipe off stains of the double murder.
